JUDGE BULLOCK'S ACCIDENT

At 6 o'clock this morning Judge W. S. Bullock went out into his back yard and bored an auger hole into a big stump, filled it with gun powder, placed a fuse in and lighted it. To blow the stump up, and after waiting a reasonable time for the explosion to take place, and it not having done so, he investigated, and prepared to place a fresh fuse, when to his astonishment the explosion took place, and the flames and powder poured straight into his face, the principal injury being to the left side of the face and ear, which was badly burned and filled with the powder. Fortunately the eyes were entirely uninjured. The physician who attended the judge reports him resting easily and that he can be out attending to business in a few days.
